Theoretical part

1.1 Studying in groups

The first method of learning English – studying in group classes - is mainly encountered at school or kindergarten.

The scheme of work here is simple: the teacher explains the material and reinforces it with assignments for pairs / groups, occasionally working with each student personally. Being accustomed to this approach to science since childhood, already an adult subconsciously chooses this method of learning English and goes to sign up for a group course. However, this learning technology has its advantages and disadvantages, and is not suitable for everyone.
