ANALYSIS OF THE RESEARCH ARTICLE

O.V. Zapevalina. Mediacompetence as a part of mediaeducation. Modern technologies and scientific and technological progress, humanitarian sciences, Volume 2018 № 1, 2020. – 193 p.

Abstract. This article provides the emergence of media education, as well as media competence as the willingness to observe, comprehend and draw one's own conclusions.

ARTICLE:

Media education as a term first appeared in UNESCO documents in 1973. In Russia, the concept of media education is encountered in 1986 in the works of A.V. Sharikov.

Modern literature, scientific publications define the concept of media education more broadly. It includes, as one of its components, media competence, which seeks to educate critical citizens who are able to express not only their own opinion, but also the ability to reasonably prove their attitude to information appearing in the media. We agree with the opinion of A.P. Korochensky that the goal of media education is to educate a versatile personality, capable and ready for lifelong learning.
